FLOODS RAVAGE THREE STATES

Death, Destruction Follow As Waters Sweep Over Properties

(By Associated Press)
CINCINNATI, March 20.—Flood waters of the raging rivers of six states converged today on the tri-state region surrounding Cincinnati, carrying death and destruction in their wake.

From Huntington, W. Va., to Louisville, Ky., the Ohio river and its tributaries gobbled up farm acres by the thousand and swirled around city homes, driving farmer and city cousin alike to higher ground.

Farm Lands Inundated

Twenty feet of water flowed over 3,000 acres of farm lands near Elizabethtown, O., near the Indiana border west of here; east of Cincinnati stretched a most fully two miles wide; New Richmond, O., was two-thirds under water; water gushed through the main street of Manchester; Huntington's river-side quailed before a stream at 512 foot level as against a flood stage of 50 feet; Louisville retreated before a rising stream; and Portsmouth, O., anxiously patrolled a levee for protection against the river's lunges.

Death crawled southward with the flood.

I struck first at Gallipolis, O., taking Mrs. John Harrison, 40, and her daughter, Alice, 7, as their automobile went over a bank at California, Ky., a skiff overturned near a power transformer and Gale Irig, 18, was killed by electrical discharge through the water.

George Heideman, Henry Linne-man, and John Bain were drowned at Covington, Ky., after being washed carried their automobile into a creek, and at Lewisburg, Ind., Charles Stephen, 14, drew a bottle from the stream, drank of its contents, and died of convulsions.

Rescuers carried Mrs. Anna Morgan, 26, Negro and her new born child from their flooded home on the river front, but the child soon was dead of the exposure.

ZANGARA, STILL UNAFRAID, PAYS DEATH PENALTY

Slayer of Mayor Cermak Dies Calmly, Denounces Capitalists

WALKS UNAIDED TO ELECTRIC CHAIR

Assassin Who Wounded 4, Killed One, Defiant Until Death

(By Associated Press)
RAIFORD, Fla., March 20.—Giuseppe Zangara, the man who killed Mayor Anton J. Cermak of Chicago, and wounded four others in an attempt to assassinate President Roosevelt at Miami, February 15, was electrocuted here today.

The little Italian immigrant was taken into the death chamber at 9:11 a. m. Eastern standard time. The current was applied at 9:15 a. m.

A heavy rainstorm beat over the flat tops of Raiford State prison at the hour of the execution.

Autopsy Ordered

An autopsy was ordered to follow, and three physicians were named to make the examination with particular attention to the brain and stomach. It was announced.

The prison was guarded by squads of national guardsmen armed with machine guns and stationed on building tops as the switch was thrown sending the current through Zangara's body. Zangara was officially pronounced dead at 9:27 a. m., 12 minutes after the electricity was applied.

The assassin was taken to the death cell escorted by two guards. He was dressed in striped trousers and white shirt open at the neck. He wore no shoes.

When Zangara saw the chair he stopped suddenly and glanced around at the approximately 30 persons in the death chamber.

Still Unafraid

Turning to his guards Zangara said "don't hold me. I'm afraid of chair."

The guards then released the assassin and Zangara walked unaided to the chair.

HITLER'S LIFE IS ENDANGERED

Attempt to Murder German Chancellor Is Frustrated

(By Associated Press)
MUNICH, Germany, March 20.—The federal commissioner for the Munich police chief informed the press today an attempt on the life of Chancellor Adolf Hitler, planned by one German and two Russian communists, was prevented by the watchfulness of the populace and police.

The chancellor who came to his former Nazi headquarters here for a short visit, was returning today to Berlin.

Early this morning three men were observed arriving at the Waggoner monument near Hitler's home here where they deposited three hand grenades and some ammunition.

While a passerby notified the police, they escaped in an automobile. The police commissioner stated that if a single shot was fired against members of the new government, even if it meant "unparalleled chaos which no authority in the world could prevent."

Chancellor Hitler left for Berlin at 7 a. m., by airplane arriving there at 9:15 a. m.

CONGRESS ACTS ON BEER TODAY

Final Action Legalizing Brew Foreseen Before Nightfall

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, March 20.—Final enactment of the beer bill became a matter of hours today as congressional conferees agreed to legalize a 3.2 per cent brew.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—Final action by nightfall on beer and economy legislation was in prospect today, with congress ready to start the Roosevelt farm relief program on the road to enactment.

Democratic leaders were confident that senate and house differences on the Cullen Beer bill could be adjusted quickly in conference. All that was needed to send the $500,000,000 economy measure to the President was Vice President Garner's signature.

With the budget-balancing bills disposed of, the house was in position to take up the farm legislation as soon as approved by its agriculture committee. That committee was called to meet this afternoon and Representative Byrns, majority leader, predicted house passage of the bill by Tuesday night.

However, a host of amendments were in sight, some of which would add new crops to those designated to receive benefits while others would curtail the broad powers invested in the secretary of agriculture.

While the house waited for the bill, consideration was given today to a measure extending the benefits of the emergency banking act to banks outside the Federal Reserve system.

SALEM TO PLAY SPRING CONTEST

East Liverpool Listed As Tentative Opponent In Grid Battle

A spring football game, possibly with East Liverpool High, will be played by Salem gridders next month, school officials announced today.

Several Northeastern Ohio schools have made negotiations with Salem for a spring grid battle but final arrangements for the contest are being held up, the announcement stated, pending final word from East Liverpool.

A tentative date for the battle, which will be the first spring gridiron duel ever played here, has been set for April 21. A Friday night duel under floodlights of Kelly stadium, is planned.

Spring training started at the Salem school gymnasium in charge of Coach Floyd Stone a week ago, more than 100 candidates—this number including track and field prospects—turning out.

3 Bandits Admit Holdup of Salem Gasoline Station

Three Canton men, arrested for the holdup of a Wellsville gasoline station attendant last week, have been identified by W. P. Cullen, Salem filling station operator, as the men who, on Tuesday night, February 7, held him up, beat him and robbed him of $26 in money.

Cullen, accompanied by Police Chief Ralph Stoffer, visited the three men at the county jail in Lisbon, immediately identifying two of them as his assailants, Sheriff Frank Ballantine reported today.

The third man is believed to have been the driver of an automobile in which the men escaped after two of them had attacked and beaten Cullen in the office of his station, on West State st.

Ballantine reported that the men have admitted the Salem holdup and have also been identified with holdups and robberies in several other Northeastern Ohio cities.

The men, Telma Gutierrez, Paul Chirumbo and Tony Cusino, all of Canton, are being held in the county jail for the April grand jury. At least three highway robbery indictments will be asked by Prosecutor George Lafferty.

FARMERS BANK OPEN ON CUSTOMARY BASIS

Both Salem Institutions Now Operate Under Government Approval; Canfield Bank Also Receives License

"Financially Sound"—Salem's financial institutions today bore that stamp of approval, from no less an authority than the secretary of the treasury of the United States.

Both the First National and the Farmers National banks have been fully licensed by the treasury for the resumption of normal banking functions. The former received its permit to reopen last week and the latter was given word of government approval yesterday.

Along with the Salem bank, the federal reserve also announced today the licensing of additional federal reserve members, including the Farmers National bank at Canfield.

Others were the First National of Fostoria; First National at Garrettsville; Campbell National at La Rue; Ripley National at Ripley; City National, Tiffin; National Bank of Adams county, West Union.

In the meantime, as government and federal reserve officials continue their work of issuing licenses, there has been a noticeable quickening in business and merchandising activities in the areas affected, with payrolls and private accounts, as well, released without restriction.

Handicaps Eliminated
Handicaps which previously stood in the way of normal business functions were removed by the availability of currency, providing a stimulus to buying as employees were given assurance that payrolls would be met.

In both Salem banks, conditions have been exceptionally favorable since the reopening, executives pointed out.

After several days of operation, the First National bank reported that deposits have kept far in advance of withdrawals which have been made only for ordinary business purposes. A large quantity of gold has been received, and, in addition it is believed that considerable money that has been in hiding has been brought out for safe keeping in the banks.

Conditions were normal, too, at the Farmers bank today. Most depositors had been cognizant of the fact that the issuance of the license was but a matter of a few days as treasury officials waded through the immense amount of work which was necessary to restore normal conditions.

Appreciate Cooperation
As a result they were ready to take up their banking affairs where they left off when the holiday was proclaimed.

Officials of both local banks have expressed their appreciation of the cooperation from the public, much in the vein of Secretary of the Treasury Woodin's recent statement, in which he said: "The people have been cooperating with us magnificently. In a little while the stress will have passed. People are using the reopened banks as banks were intended to be used—as a convenience in paying their bills and safeguarding their funds. In other words, the country understands what the administration is doing and is showing its confidence—that means everything."

Currency which has been withdrawn and hoarded should be returned to deposit in savings or checking accounts. You may deposit in your savings or checking accounts as usual. This applies to school and Christmas savings accounts as well.

Three Men Kidnap Warren Youngster

WARREN, March 20.—A police dragnet was spread across Ohio and Pennsylvania today in the hope it would ensnare the kidnapers of 15-year-old Peter Myers, Jr.

Meanwhile, the boy's parents said they were awaiting instructions from the three men who snatched Peter from his home in Masury, near here, Saturday night.

Two of the men, police were told by Mike Stevens, the Myers' chauffeur, carried revolvers and a third carried a sub-machine gun. As they shoved the boy into their automobile, they thrust a note into Stevens' hand.

"Keep your mouth shut," said the note. "Don't tell police. Our agent will see you in a few days."

The boy's father, Peter Myers Sr., operates a filling station here. He asserted he had no enemies, and police said the kidnapers undoubtedly would demand ransom.

Banker Is Dead

NOW OR NEVER

Apparently, President Roosevelt shares the general feeling that this is the time to give congress its opportunity to prove that representatives and senators can rise to the occasion with quick cooperation when there are many things which have to be done. There is less and less probability that he will interrupt the continuity of his program. He will rush it through as rapidly as it can be digested, in the hope that congress will be ready to go home before May and stay there, barring emergencies, until January, 1934.

It is as if President Roosevelt had pulled the balky Democratic mule into a dead run and was afraid to stop lest the passengers in the springwagon miss the thrill of their lives. They have been getting the fastest ride they have had since Woodrow Wilson succeeded in getting the mule into a gallop. After a generation of watching congressmen kick themselves, their government and the party system to pieces, it is a real treat to see representatives and senators showing ability to cooperate.

It won't last. The best President Roosevelt can hope for if he has good luck will be a period of grace long enough to let most of his legislative program get through before the Democratic congressional majority takes the bit in its teeth and starts to go its own way. Unless there is a surprise, the President's troubles will increase consistently from now on. His effectiveness hasn't been impaired permanently, but the days of seeming magic are over. After all, nothing has happened to make it any easier for representatives and senators to cooperate than to consume their teams in fruitless bickering.

If the Roosevelt luck holds out, most of the administrative program will be enacted before the official beginning of summer. By that time congress will be taking its own way, but it may adjourn without difficulty. There will be, then, a long period in which the President can have things his own way. When congress meets again, the "honeymoon" will be over. The country agrees that the time to enjoy it is now—without interruptions. The spell will be broken soon enough without any unnecessary assistance.

THE FARM GOAL

The farm bill sponsored by the Roosevelt administration specifically states a policy of giving "agricultural commodities a purchasing power with respect to articles that farmers buy equivalent to the purchasing power of agricultural commodities in the pre-war period August, 1909-July, 1914." This point is perfectly clear. The exact methods have not been stated as yet, but the bill gives the secretary of agriculture broad powers from which to choose.

This is a definite goal which can be described in figures. It means that the present price level of farm products will have to be more than doubled, providing that other prices remain the same. Average prices received at the farm for agricultural products last month were 51 per cent lower than they were from 1909 to 1914. At the same time, average prices paid by farmers for commodities were 4 per cent higher. If the figure 100 be made representative of parity between prices received and prices paid by farmers in the pre-war period, 47 is the ratio now.

In terms of commodities, the Roosevelt program would treble the present prices received for wheat, corn and oats. Prices paid for cotton, hogs, eggs and wool would have to be doubled, and prices of beef and butter would have to be raised 50 per cent. One wonders if President Roosevelt and his advisers may not have hitched their farm wagon to a star hoping to achieve a fair measure of success by working toward an impossibly remote goal.

It scarcely needs to be pointed out that the 1909-1914 level of farm prices was abnormally high. They were symbols of the complaint of those days—high cost of living. Figures of the department of labor show that they had risen 44 per cent since the turn of the century while the wholesale prices of all commodities, including farm products, was rising only 23 per cent. Surely there is more than ordinary significance in the fact that the new administration has selected as standards for its agricultural program figures from a period of abnormally high prices. If the objective were to be reached—if farm prices were to be boosted from 50 to 200 per cent—it would necessitate a boot-strap lifting by every class of buyers in the country. Little wonder the public doubts that it can be done.

What Others Say

SERIOUS COLLEGE GIRLS

What is the depression doing to the character and personality of the college girls?

Hein Taft Manning, dean of Bryn Mawr college, and daughter of the late President Taft, was quoted in Columbus this week as saying that college girls are more serious minded and industrious than they were before the financial depression.

Bryn Mawr girls have been known more for their high scholarship than for their frivolity in the past, though perhaps that reputation was not founded on facts. On the face of it, the thought that they are becoming more serious minded is a bit appalling.

But are they? Isn't it more likely that the causes that engage the interest of college girls of today are more serious than those of the pre-depression era, rather than that the young women themselves are different? And the times, not the girls, have produced these causes.

College girls are always serious, whether it be in developing a "line" by which to get a prom bid or in working out a plan for the uplift of the masses.

It would be too bad if the economic situation should result in their neglecting the development of those traits usually called womanly. A world without feminine wiles would be worse than a world without money.—Columbus Citizen.

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, March 21

A fairly active and beneficent state of affairs is read from the predominant lunar aspects, those favoring employment, writings, all pertaining to publishing and promotion, and also business generally, although it is admonished that the manipulation of funds be wise and restrained.

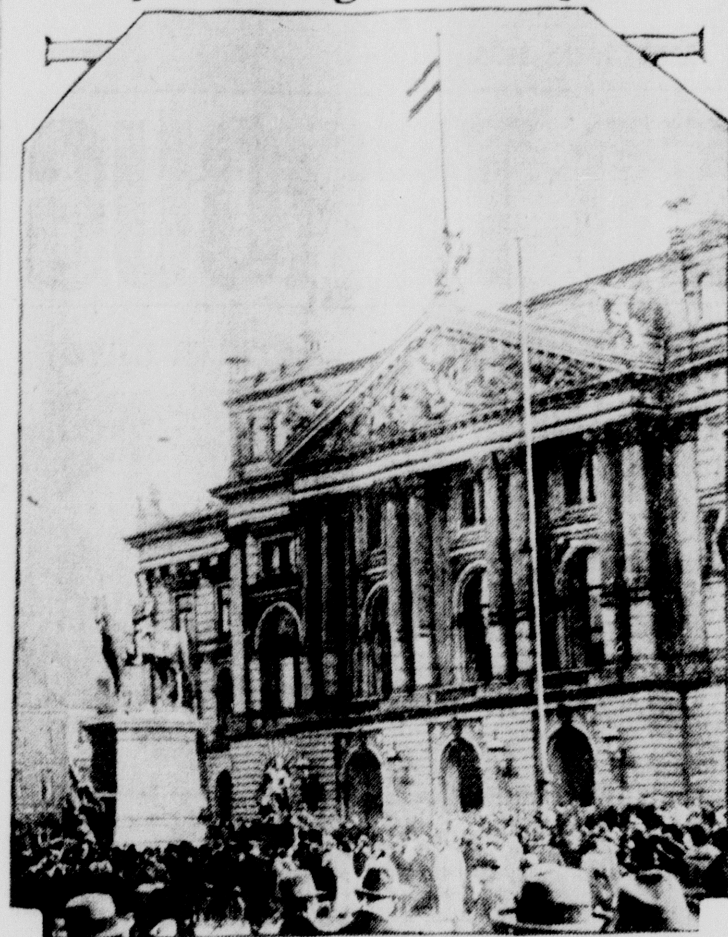

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a fairly active and successful year in business, especially all relating to writings, advertising and kindred lines. Employment is fairly promising, but finances should be safeguarded. The mind may be keyed up, excitable or caustic, the private associations complicated by some irregularity, spectacular or unconventional touch. A child born on this day may be clever, versatile, succeeding in employment or in writing, but may have a mind at high tension and an unconventional social disposition.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland

Value of Oxygen In Disease

If you have had occasion to visit a hospital, perhaps you noticed a room set aside for the storage of tanks containing oxygen and other gases. Though most of us are aware of the necessity of oxygen for life, perhaps few realize that oxygen is daily used in the treatment of certain diseases.

"Anoxemia" is a big word. It means that condition in which there is a deficient amount of oxygen in the blood.

Anoxemia may result from a decrease of oxygen in the blood circulating in the small blood vessels of the lungs. It may be caused by an obstruction to the air passages, as may happen in pneumonia, pulmonary embolism, diphtheria and other inflammations of the air passages.

Lack of oxygen occurs in cases of "carbon monoxide poisoning." This poisoning is due to inhalation of illuminating gas, or to gas from the exhaust of automobiles.

Lack of oxygen occurs in certain types of heart disease. Severe hemorrhage will lead to anoxemia. It may also occur from breathing poor air, or air deficient in proper amount of oxygen.

Symptoms of Anoxemia

The sufferer from anoxemia has a grayish or greenish pallor. The lips are bluish and the fingers and toes are cold. The victim breathes rapidly and has a rapid pulse. From lack of air he may appear to be choking. The administration of oxygen in all such cases is of great benefit.

It is especially valuable when given to the victims of pneumonia. In severe cases of pneumonia, breathing is almost impossible. When oxygen gas is given the breathing is easier and usually the life of the victim is saved.

The value of oxygen in resuscitating individuals from drowning, suffocation and asphyxiation cannot be overestimated. It is of tremendous value in saving the lives of infants at birth. Frequently, new born babies have difficulty in breathing. The use of oxygen carries them beyond the zone of danger. In former years such suffering babies were spanked, immersed in cold and hot water baths, or air was blown into their little mouths. In many instances, despite the heroic efforts of the physician, the infant succumbed. The prospect is much brighter today.

How Oxygen Is Given

Oxygen gas is stored in a large metal cylinder. It has an attachment to a breathing cylinder or tent. The apparatus can be carried to the bedside. In an emergency it may be used in the operating room. It is carried on the ambulance and is available at all times.

The necessity of oxygen for the maintenance of life has been known for centuries. Fresh air is our natural source of oxygen. We should ever avail ourselves of an abundant supply of this precious element. At night the windows of the bedroom should be kept open. During the day breathe deeply of the fresh air.

By O. O. McINTYRE.

NEW YORK, March 20.—Diary of a modern Pepsy. An interesting letter from Boss Lord's son, Kenneth, and another from Daniel Frohman about some of the human rays of Dana's Sun. To a stationer's new shop and, looking startled, the proprietor inquired: "I suppose I look like Mr. Clare Briggs to you, too?" Which he did.

At my stint, and pleasantly interrupted by Messmore and Kitty Kendall phoning us to join them at Palm Beach. So to the Robert Garlands, where came Dorothy Stone, Kay Francis, Jean Dalrymple, Cosmo Hamilton and Carl Van Vechten. Later, riding home with Fannie Hurst.

Dinner with Pat and Bob Brinkerhoff and Cecil Arden, the Lowell Thomases and Roy Chapman Andrews there, and afterward to Skumund Speath's divertissement, vastly amusing Home late, and, propping in the lee box, fouled a cut of chilled veal in a half dozen gobbles.

Idling near the new Roxy the other day, the sidewalk crowds suddenly tipped into one of those pre-ludes to a celebrity rush. Primo Carnerio's enormous bulk towered in the center of the group. As he extracted himself, and passed on, an observer, wagging his head, chirped: "Sure a mess of guy!"

Anna Held Jr. has cast her lot far from the Broadway heavens in which her famous mother was a particular star. With her husband, Miss Held is successfully conducting a roadside tavern on the fringe of Peekskill. Here, in a peaceful setting along the Hudson, she lives in suburban simplicity, going to market, watching over a flower and vegetable garden, and strolling the countryside. Memories of her mother—letters and telegrams wishing her success and happiness—dot the walls of the inn.

I think of Anna Held as one facing the final adventure bravely. As a reporter, I talked with her a few weeks before her passing. One remembers her always for her large, brooding eyes, so inexpressibly sad. In her accents of liquid French, she said: "The best things in life are often late. So why shudder at death?"

Personal nomination for the best individual stage performance of the season—that of Lloyd Nolan in "One Sunday Afternoon."

The newest stage lover is Francis Lederer. His ability to charm is due to his old-world manners. Singularly adept at the sweeping bow and handkiss in meeting the ladies, his technique gives every lady the impression his life is a constant yearn to meet her. Off stage, he is a sort of clabbered George Jessel, somewhat a dowdy dresser and usually in need of a haircut. Neither is he a gallant in stature, yet when he enters a room, everything comes to a full stop. All eyes are on him. Perhaps it's a prepassant build-up. Whatever it is, he wows 'em.

Arthur Samuels revives that old-time banker, with side-wheel whiskers, and detachable cuffs, who sweeps apple parings into the top drawer.

Thingumabobs: Sam Kahan, artist, reported every day for a year at a suspended newspaper's office until his contract was settled. . . . Clay Morgan, French Line publicist, was once a handsome leading man in repertoire. . . . Dwight Morrow spent $500,000 of his own money promoting good will between America and Mexico while ambassador there. . . . Capt. Norman R. Raine, author of "Tugboat Annie," quit a Canadian reporter job to ship twice around the world for his fiction material. . . . Valerie Edwards, former London Gaiety girl, is one of the world's famous miniature painters. . . . Grantland Rice has not had one day free of work in 22 years. . . . V. V. McNitt's hobby is editing a Southbridge, Mass., daily which he owns. . . . Lupe Velez spent her girlhood in a San Antonio convent.

I have cupped an ear to all the bank reform suggestions. But what

I crave is the return of the old-time banker, with side-wheel whiskers, and detachable cuffs, who sweeps apple parings into the top drawer.

ALWAYS DEAD TIRED?

How sad! Sallow complexion, coated tongue, poor appetite, bad breath, pimply skin and always tired. What's wrong? Chances are you're poisoned by clogged bowels and inactive liver. They act easily upon the bowels, help free the system of poison caused by faulty elimination and tone up liver.

Rosy cheeks, clear eyes and youthful energy make a success of life. Take Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets, nightly. Know them by their olive color. 15c, 30c and 60c. All druggists.

STUDEBAKER CARRIES ON

Receivership proceedings find world's oldest vehicle manufacturer with assets exceeding liabilities by over $70,000,000

FACTS LEADING TO COURT ACTION REVEALED

STUDEBAKER is still Studebaker in spirit, scope and service. There has been no change, except for the better, in the policies and program of the historic Studebaker institution.

And Studebaker is fortunate that the men appointed to administer its affairs are H. S. Vance, Vice President of The Studebaker Corporation, Paul G. Hoffman, Vice President of The Studebaker Corporation and A. G. Bean, President of The White Motor Company—men schooled in the traditions which have given Studebaker its world-wide prestige.

The great South Bend plants of Studebaker, closed since the announcement of the bank moratorium, reopen Tuesday, March 21, under the direction of these seasoned automotive executives.

The New Strength of Studebaker

The Studebaker Corporation and its subsidiaries (including The White Motor Company and The Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company, which are not included in this receivership) had on January 1, 1933, excluding good will, net assets of $77,622,293 in excess of all liabilities and a book value, excluding good will, of $26.22 per share of Studebaker common stock. Of these total net assets, net current assets were $21,781,243 or $8.84 per share of common stock. Cash alone was more than $9,000,000.

Directors of Studebaker consented to the friendly receivership, despite the company's strong financial condition, because in their opinion the best interests of Studebaker would be protected until certain legal entanglements in connection with the proposed merger with The White Motor Company are adjusted.

The Studebaker-White Merger

Six months ago it was decided unanimously by the respective Boards of Directors of The Studebaker Corporation and The White Motor Company, that many economies and commercial advantages would result from a merger. A plan looking toward this merger was submitted to the stockholders of The White Motor Company. Within a short time 95 per cent of the White stock was turned in, manifesting the almost unanimous approval of White stockholders.

In recent months, however, holders of approximately 3 per cent of the White stock have threatened litigation against the merger unless their stock were purchased at a price which Studebaker directors felt to be unreasonable and upon terms which it was impossible to meet. Studebaker recognizes the right of minority stockholders to set any price they please on their White stock—even, as in this case, a price higher than it has commanded on the open market at any time since 1929. In addition to private negotiations for this minority stock, Studebaker offered a plan of consolidation under which its value could have been established by court appraisal but the minority stockholders refused to accept it.

The Studebaker Corporation issued $14,900,000 in notes in connection with the acquisition of the assets of The White Motor Company. As a result of the attitude of the small minority group, these assets of White have not yet been merged with those of Studebaker. Furthermore, the terms under which these notes were issued have made it impossible, in the present banking situation, for Studebaker to secure its customary financial accommodations.

Studebaker Forges Ahead

Studebaker's competitive position in the industry has been improving steadily. During each of the past four years Studebaker-built cars have secured a larger proportion of total registrations than in the previous year.

The four lines of trucks—White, Pierce-Arrow, Studebaker and Indiana—now sold by The White Company, showed a larger dollar volume last year than any competing company except Ford and Chevrolet. With these four lines of trucks, White branches made a better showing in January 1933 than in January 1932, when general conditions were much better.

There will be no variation whatsoever in the quality of Studebaker and Rockne workmanship. Studebaker and Rockne automotive products will continue to be built without interruption or change, by Studebaker men. This pioneering organization has already faced and fought and triumphed over more "depressions", wars and "bad times" than any other company in the automobile business.

Studebaker now confidently carries on, assured that it can continue to offer the American public the kind of automobiles and service for which the name Studebaker is distinguished.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE.

It was near midnight when Mary and Bill Calvert reached the house in the Catskills. On the way she lost track of direction and distance, the rush of night against her face cooled her fevered cheeks, and lifted little strands of the golden hair. Suspense, uncertainty as to Steve's condition, kept a nervousness spiraling in her breast. A revolving endlessness of haste to be with him, yet, in the background, less important things clamored for attention, too.

There was some feminine anxiety in the matter of clothes, but the few things she possessed were well-chosen and becoming. The very simplicity of her apparel gave it a kind of smartness. But now, since she knew Steve had sent for her—that he wanted her above Eileen—she was scarcely concerned with the impression she would make with these rich people.

The freshness of the country air was strange and sweet; the house, as she alighted from the car, was larger than she had expected; it was long and white, built of stone and wood and set in the midst of a green lawn that resembled a park with its trees and shrubbery. She entered a wide hall with bill, and a servant took her bags. On either side she glimpsed spacious rooms. The luxury of thick rugs and mahogany and rich shaded lamps.

A tall woman with a round face like Bill's and dark friendly eyes under dignified gray hair, came down the broad steps into the hall. Her smile was faintly troubled, but when she spoke her voice was mellow—imperturbably hospitable.

"Mother, this is Miss Kennedy," Bill said, and Mrs. Calvert came to her and took her hand. Both of them said, "How do you do?"

"She'll want to see Steve right away—if it's all right," Bill said. "I reckon it will be all right—won't it, if he's not asleep?"

"I think so, but I'll ask the nurse to make sure," Mrs. Calvert said in her pleasantly poised voice. "Perhaps, though, we had better show Miss Kennedy her room first."

They all went up the stairs, preceded by the servant who carried Mary's bags into a bedroom in which a single dim light showed a decorative scheme of soft green and gold, with pastel draperies and light-painted furniture. Another open door showed a bathroom of gleaming tile, blue curtains, tinted and glowing porcelain.

"Please try to feel thoroughly at home in this house," Mrs. Calvert told her. "You'll be with us quite some time I hope, and if Bill doesn't look after you properly, you just come and tell his mother. Probably, though, your trouble will be to get rid of him. He's likely to make a pest of himself where there's a pretty girl around."

Mrs. Calvert smiled, and Mary felt a sudden affection for this amiable lady. Bill grinned at his mother's jest.

"Mother's just kidding you—I'm a woman hater myself," he said. "Any way, Miss Kennedy won't be interested in me."

Presently, with the nurse's permission Mary was led to the room where Steve was an invalid. It was at a corner of the house with windows on two sides, furnished in mahogany and chintz with a wide soft rug; an adjoining bath glistened white with gleaming tiles. A white-clothed nurse, severe and middle-aged—a Mrs. Deal—looked upon Mary with a hostile eye.

"Not more than five minutes, at the most I'll be back when the time is up."

Primly, she marched away. Steve's face was whiter than Mary had ever seen it before. His eyes were dazed, tired. There was a bandage around his forehead and over his hair, like a white cap.

"Mary!" The face turned on the pillow toward her. He might have been dreaming from his tone. "What are you doing here?"

She closed the door behind her then took a chair beside the bed, but she made no move to touch him. He seemed very ill.

"I came to be with you, Steve darling," she succeeded in making her voice calm matter-of-fact. It would not do to show emotion and get him excited, although her own heartache and sympathy stifled her; her fingers twined together, but she kept them out of his sight.

"I wanted you," his voice was tired, and the gray eyes searched her face. "I got a bad bump, Mary, but I'll be all right. I'm better already, just because you're here."

There was a flicker of a smile on his colorless lips; he put a hand out of the cover, and she pressed it gently.

"You mustn't talk too much," she told him. "And you mustn't worry, either. I'll be right here with you, darling."

A little color came back to his face. "Isn't Bill Calvert a peacen?" I know you'll like them all just as I do. It's a bit thick on Eileen for me to be parked here like this for a couple of weeks but honestly I don't think she minds it. Everything worked out splendidly, Mary. I'm so glad I came up here, and broke the news to her in my own way."

"You mustn't talk too much," she told him. "And you mustn't worry, either. I'll be right here with you, darling."

"It makes our conscience feel better, doesn't it?" Mary smiled.

"The old conscience is as clear as a maiden's prayer book," he told her with a flash of his old self. "Will be back on my feet and fighting as soon as I get rest. rest." His voice trailed off.

She could see that he was weak. No use taxing his strength too far. She bent over and kissed him lightly on the cheek, and as she straightened up, the nurse came back into the room. In her own room, Mary found a maid in a black dress turning down her bed.

"Shall I unpack your things and hang them up?" the girl asked pleasantly.

"No, thank you very much," Mary said, unwilling to have this strange girl rummage among her clothes.

"Young Mr. Calvert is down in the library," said the girl "and he said, if you weren't too tired, he'd like to have you drop down and have a bit of refreshment with him before you turn in."

A pleasant house. A charming, dignified way to live. Mary thought. No hurry, no excitement, so different from any life she had ever experienced. Some day—in her own home and Steve's it would be something like this. A little later she walked slowly down the wide staircase, all her nervousness gone and her weary self almost refreshed and quietly content. Bill was in the library, busy with a silver pencil on a small table, a tray of sandwiches, and a plate of cake cut in squares. A small roll of flesh showed above his collar—the explanation of his slight overweight was visible before him.

"I always have something before I turn in—I seem to need just a snack," he explained, jovially.

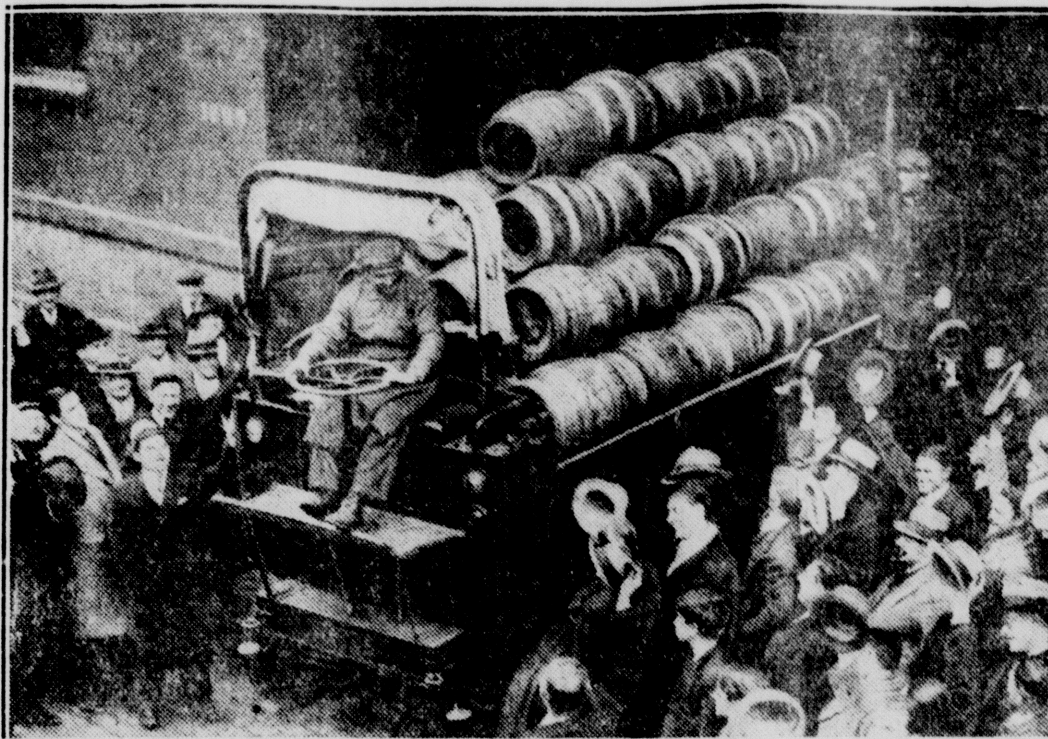

They sat on one of the two sofas that flanked the empty fireplace, with the little table between them. It was very confidential and friendly, this midnight snack, with Mary nibbling a piece of cake, and Bill Calvert putting away innumerable small sandwiches. No wonder Steve adored these people. Money was at the base of their life, of course, but there was something else besides that—an unconscious and simple case that a man like Buck Landers could never acquire if his wealth ran into billions.

"And when am I to see your sister?" Mary asked Bill.

"Oh, in the morning, I suppose. She's gone to bed now, and so has father. But, oh, yes; Eileen wants me to tell you—she wants to have an important talk with you. That's what she says it is—important."

Back to participate in the doubtful pleasure of taking a 50 per cent cut in salary, Gloria Swanson, noted screen star, is pictured with her husband, Michael Farmer, as they arrived at New York on the S. ILLUSION:

The magician exhibits a flower pot with hinged sides on a table in the center of the stage. He opens out the sides to show that this container is empty. Closing it up, he places a screen between it and the audience. After a short period of magic incantations he removes the screen. The astounded audience sees a beautiful girl, covered to the shoulders in lovely flowers, rising from the "empty" container. Where did she come from?

EXPLANATION:

The girl was hiding behind the drape of the table. There is a trap door in the bottom of the flower pot, with a hole large enough to allow her to crawl through. The flowers, called "magician's" feather flowers, are a regular part of a magician's outfit. The flower girl wears a rubber tunic and a haining cap to keep the flowers compressed into small space. She slides the tunic down and the flowers expand when she emerges.

CAMELS

It's FUN TO BE FOOLED
...IT'S MORE FUN TO KNOW

A trick frequently worked in cigarette advertising is the illusion that mildness in a cigarette comes from mysterious processes of manufacture.

EXPLANATION: All popular cigarettes today are made in modern sanitary factories with up-to-date machinery. All are heat-treated—some more intensively than others, because raw, inferior tobaccos require more intensive treatment than choice, ripe tobaccos.

The real difference comes in the tobaccos that are used. The better the tobacco, the milder it is.

It is a fact, well known by leaf tobacco experts, that Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE tobaccos than any other popular brand.

That is why Camels are so mild. That is why Camels have given more pleasure to more people than any other cigarette ever made.

It's the secret of Camels' rich "bouquet"...their cool flavor...their non-irritating mildness.

Give your taste a chance to appreciate the greater pleasure and satisfaction of the more expensive tobaccos.

bureau predicted, and still water was dropping over West Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio and Indiana and a lingering, too so that snow may fall to cloak miles of misery.

Rain started it all, first drizzling, then in torrents, from the Great Lakes to the Blue Grass region, Hamilton, O., recorded 127 inches this month when a respite came early Sunday, and the fall was typical. It filled the Allegheny far up in western New York, and sent its roaring through western Pennsylvania, to meet a Monongahela swell, as the Ohio river rushed south to meet the Kanawha, the Scioto, the Muskingum, the Licking of Kentucky, the Big and Little Miami rivers of southwestern Ohio, and the White Water of Indiana. Around Cincinnati was every evidence of their meeting.

At Newport, Ky., thirty-five city blocks lay under dingy waters, and 1,500 were made homeless. Covington, Ky., next door, fared as badly. In Cincinnati's East End, Little Columbia, Marmet, Summerville and Sedamville, were islands. Seven thousand bags of sand were shipped to hold the river off the municipal airport and suburban Linwood. Every house in California, Ky., was submerged, and six feet of water coursed through California, O.

500 Persons Rescued

Nearly 500 people were rescued from river camps about this "gate-way to the south." The youngest was three-months old, the oldest, 80 years. Walter Stratham alone, saved 67 persons from their cottages. A woman spent a night atop her cabin, waving a parlor lamp to draw attention.

Suburban Milford and nearby Battavia were almost isolated. So was suburban Loveland, and its normal supply cut off, it relied on tank trucks for its drinking water.

But to the north of Cincinnati, Dayton, O., rested snugly behind flood control works President Roosevelt has called "ideal." Four great dams and a system of wide-spread overflow basins held the Big Miami in check to prevent disaster such as that of March 25, 1913—when the breaking of a dam carried more than 245 to their deaths.

Other Areas Flooded

To some degree, flood waters harassed residents north to Pittsburgh and south to Louisville. Adams, Pike, Jackson and Scioto counties in southwestern and south central Ohio were cut off. Water poured through Greenup, Ky., and, except for a single high railroad bridge, isolated the eastern section of Mayersville, Ky. A hundred families were driven to high ground there. 20 more in Ripley, O., 50 more in Athens, O., by the Hocking river, and scores more in Parkersburg, W. Va., Ashland, Ky., Louisville, Evansville, Ind., Gallipolis, O., and Huntington, W. Va., and their suburbs.

In all, churches, lodge-halls, and the homes of friends received a homeless horde. Barges were piled along to carry more to safety. Food went rapidly, 2,000 sandwiches in Cincinnati vanishing within an hour. Highways were impassable, trains felt their way slowly over water-threatened roadbeds. A freight train spilled from an undermined track near Cincinnati. Rising water drove four truck lines from their terminals into the new $4,000,000 Union Terminal here ten days before its formal dedication.

OHIO ASSEMBLY FACES BIG JOB

Calendars Bulging With Legislation of Various Natures

(By Associated Press)

COLUMBUS, O., March 20. — Spurred by the possibility of a recess Thursday, the legislature tonight begins one of the busiest weeks of the present session.

First on the calendars are two emergency banking bills recommended by Governor White as an aid to state banks unable to reopen under new regulations. The chief executive hoped to have the bills passed tonight along with another measure to authorize the industrial commission to borrow money for the payment of workmen's compensation claims.

Asks Quick Action

Quick action on all three measures was requested by the governor in special messages last week. He also has urged speedy consideration by the senate of bills to transfer the bureau of motor vehicles from the secretary of state's office to the highway department and to establish a state road patrol system.

Tomorrow the governor will recommend passage of the liquor control bill as an emergency revenue measure if congress acts finally to modify the Volstead law. The bill would legalize the sale of beer and create a commission to control its manufacture and distribution. It would become effective upon passage by the legislature and approval by the governor.

The governor said he would confer with legislative leaders tonight on the week's program and the recess which he favors. The suspension would be for about four weeks during which committees would consider the appropriations bill, a new taxation program and school legislation.

Other Bills Coming Up

Other bills to be disposed of during the week are those to permit installment payments of delinquent taxes, to empower common pleas judges to use their discretion in handling mortgage foreclosures and to legalize pari-mutuel betting at horse races. The latter measure as drawn is opposed by the Ohio short-sight circuit on the ground it applies only to running races and would "kill" the harness sport in the state. Stewards of the short-sight circuit met at Urbana yesterday and decided to seek amendment to the bill to include harness racing.

ESCANABA, Mich.—Daniel Boone Howard, a state hunter, today has outwitted and trapped the 12-year-old lone wolf of Warner Creek deer ward. Three times the wolf escaped from Howard's traps with the loss of only a claw or toe. Finally captured, the wolf was found to be of the Canadian-Siberian strain, lighter in color than the ordinary timber wolf, and weighing between 150 and 175 pounds.

Warren Lassies Win Tourney Title --- City Rivals To Clash

Struthers Five Loses Thrilling Finals Tilt; Pick All-Star Teams

Led by the brilliant all-around performance of "Hy" Randall, Ronald Cleaners of Warren upset the Struthers Boosters, 33-30, to win championship honors in the girls' tournament, sponsored by the World War Memorial Building association, in finals here Saturday night.

The triumph of the Warren maidens brought to a close a successful competition involving the district's leading feminine hardwood talent. The event will be held as an annual affair here under the supervision of Director J. M. Kelley.

Tied at Quarter

The final battle was easily the most sensational of the tournament with the two teams battling to a 9-9 deadlock at the close of the first quarter. The Ronalds five stepped in front, 17-14, at the half and extended its lead to four points in the third session.

Koma, great Struthers tosser, put her team back into the running with a spectacular individual performance, tossing in three field buckets a few minutes after play opened in the final period but the Warren lassies came back to clinch the decision in baskets by Randall and Hoehn.

Koma Stars

Koma probably the outstanding offensive player of the tournament, shot the leather through the hoop for nine field goals and two fouls for 20 points in the game, and was named on the tournament all-star team, along with Randall and Hoehn who started in practically every game involving the Warren team.

Warren gained its place in the finals by overwhelming the Lisbon Hanna Arrows, 47-24, in an afternoon battle. The Cleaners also eliminated another Columbiana county entry, Wellsville Merchants, 36-21, in a second round fray and apparently gained strength as the tourney progressed.

Struthers' Victories

Struthers upset the Canton all-stars, 26-15, and staged a thrilling, close game to eliminate Akron Riggs, 33-30, in the quarter-finals. A throng of more than 500 spectators witnessed finals seeing also an interesting "consolation" struggle between Akron and Lisbon maidens with the LeMar quintet triumphing, 35-22.

Akron's starting triumvirate, Griffith, Hancom and Kaiser, had little trouble breaking through the Arrows' defense, and Rubber City five holding the edge throughout. R. Klein and Harsh were leaders of the Lisbon attack.

Pick All-Star Squads

Warren's championship squad was the only entry placing two players on the all-star five, selected at the close of the tournament by Referee George E. Earley, Kelley and John Sanders. Akron was represented on the team by its flashy center, Hanscom, while Moshier of Canton, mate to Hoehn, guard as running-mate to Hoehn with Koma and Randall paired off at the forwards.

Harsh, classy Lisbon forward, was selected on the second team, along with Fitzpatrick (Struthers), Stinson (Canton), Repasky (Struthers) and Griffith (Struthers).

Team and individual trophies were awarded to players on the Warren squad, champions; Struthers, winner of runner-up honors, and Akron, the consolation winner.

Randall Leads Scorers

Randall (Warren) was awarded a trophy as the leading scorer with 47 points, Koma (Struthers) gaining the second award with a total of 45 points. Hanscom (Akron) tallied eight out of 12 shots was the best shot from the foul line.

A number of players, including Sally Burke (Rogers), I. G. A. N. Anne Zelle (Salem Pennings) and Weiner (New Philly) gained honorable mention for fine performances but did not play in sufficient games to warrant their consideration for all-star distinction.

Assisting Kelley in the operation of the tournament—a success all the way—were Eddie Kennedy as timer, Lewis Brinken, official scorer, Carl McQuiken, assistant scorer, Officials Earley and Sanders and Robert Massey.

Sox, Cubs Collide On Diamond

A white object comes a-buzzing toward the plate. One Kiki Cuyler, Chicago Cubs, featured above, takes one of those mighty cuts for which he is famous, and lays the baseball out of the orchard. That's what the Flint Flash did in a recent game with the White Sox at Los Angeles Charley Berry, White Sox receiver, is behind the plate ready to grab the ball that never arrived.

Trades Strengthen White Sox; Former A's Stars on Team

BY PAUL ZIMMERMAN
Associated Press Sports Writer
PASADENA, Calif., March 20—The winter trade winds have breathed new life into the Chicago White Sox.

Manager Lew Fonseca classes the present Comiskey club as the strongest in the N. E. O. Big Ten and just like Salem, its only claim to distinction in this Big Ten race was a decisive triumph over Alliance.

After the close of the regular season, Dover went to the sectional tournament at Dennison and, as expected, survived as that district's representative at Columbus. There wasn't a single team, except Dover, of course, in the Dennison play that could be ranked as anything more than average illustrating the weakness of the state's best and trimmed last school, 26-17. The next victim was Massillon, 26-24, in an overtime clash, while Marietta was swamped, 34-23, on the finals.

Springfield, you know, had won 26 out of 27 games during the regular season. Among its victims were Dayton Stivers, Toledo Waite, Marietta, Canton McKinley and many others. If the hope had run true Dover would have been swamped by that school.

But Old Man Dover, an obstinate, contrary old cuss, never can be depended on, much less in basketball than in any other sport. For that reason, Dover is the state champion, a real champion.

Speaking of dope—the Salem fan will be interested in this little bit of history:

In 1927 Salem High had its greatest basketball team in history. It was one of two representatives of the N. E. O. district at the state tournament. Dover represented the southwestern sector Salem, in the regular season, had walloped East Liverpool, 38-12, and Liverpool in turn had thrashed Dover by a score even worse.

Salem, on comparison of scores, was 40 points better than Dover. But old scorebooks show Dover as the state champion.

Congratulations Joe Kelley on the success of that girls basketball tourney held last week at the Memorial building and make up your mind to witness an even more successful competition Friday and Saturday when a boys' tourney is held here.

And also, in lining up your "dopes" for the week don't forget the V. F. W. fight show tomorrow night. 26 rounds of mauling are scheduled and husky-tongued Jim Koma, semiretired as manager, has an added attraction as he himself will take Takla, Mike DePalma in the main event.

ST. PETERSBURG — Fred Walker, 22-year-old outfielder, may not break into the Yankees' outfield this year, but experts are convinced he is destined to become a major league star in the not-too-distant future.

Sen. of Dixie Walker, who pitched for Washington twenty years ago, Fred has been a sensation in spring training.

MIAMI — If the Brooklyn Dodgers appear unworried over Joe Sanders' protracted holdout, perhaps a because they have two able substitutes in camp. Max Carey has been using Jake Flowers and Bobby Ross at seasons ago. Dykes, of course, will be at third.

Present plans call for Luke applying at shortstop and Minter Hayes at second, but Hal Ryhen constitutes the sole reservist unless Kress is pulled in from the outfield or Bill Sullivan, who joins the club in June, is shifted from proposed catching assignments.

Have Good Catchers
In Charles Perry and Frank Grube, veteran catchers, the Sox have plenty of strength, both defensively and offensively, behind the plate.

Their veteran advice will be necessary to help steady the pitching staff, although Fonseca considers it materially strengthened over last season. Two hurlers on whom he is depending for much assistance are Ted Lyons and Vic Fraser, both of whom were ailing last year.

Paul Gregory, the only member of the mound corps to win more games than he lost in 1932, is looked upon as the best prospect among the others. Durham is expected to show better form while Joe Heving, George Murray and Ed Walsh are considered among the best of the new prospects.

Fonseca believes the new found hitting power of the club in the winter trades will help build up confidence in the hurlers who got little offensive support last season.

TAMPA, Fla.—Pleased with the hitting of his Redlegs against the pitchers of Connie Mack's Athletics, Donie Bush gave the Cincinnati Reds a day off today, their first rest since training began 18 days ago.

Tuesday, however, the Reds will take on the Boston Red Sox at Sarasota, and then go to Ft. Myers for return games with the Athletics Wednesday and Thursday.

SARASOTA—The Boston Red Sox were minus two rookies today, Bucky Mahoney of Taunton, Mass., and Harry McNeal of Ohio, receiving their release yesterday.

Bucky has had a sore arm and McNeal was too homesick to show much.

NEW ORLEANS — Manager Roger Peckinpaugh thinks highly of several of the Cleveland Indians' rookie prospects, but he regards none more highly than E. R. Knickerbocker.

"It looks as if," said Peck today, "we have come up with one of the best shortstop prospects I have seen in the last ten years."

The Indians' second game with Washington was rained out yesterday.

LOS ANGELES—The tremendous improvement in John (Blondy) Ryan's batting form can be credited to his manager Bill Terry of the New York Giants.

Ryan came up labeled a weak man with the stick although a fielding marvel but Terry got to work and since then Ryan has been hitting at a 350 clip.

Thousands Cheer As Dover's State Champs Return Home

(By Associated Press)
DOVER, March 20—Six thousand cheering, excited persons yesterday braved a drizzling rain to welcome home the 1933 Ohio State basketball champions and say:

"Well done, my boys, well done!"

Whole County Turns Out
All of Tuscarawas county, it seemed, came out to pat the backs of the ten stout-hearted youngsters who beat down larger and heavier teams and left a trail of pre-tournament favorites in their path as they climbed the heights of scholastic rosters as 24-year-old Herman (Burr) Reierick and the boys he taught came back to town.

And, as they rode through the lanes of people to the Elks club, shill voices rang out above the roar to pay an extra tribute to Reierick, who captained the team that in 1927 brought Dover its first state title.

Three hundred automobiles were massed at Stone creek when Reierick ushered his little band of the 4-Clock train. Sirens of police motorcycles cleared the way for the long parade of cars through New Philadelphia and on to Dover.

A welcoming committee of city officials greeted them as they crossed the Tuscarawas river. Further tribute was paid by the Rev. Paul Bert at a more formal ceremony of congratulation at the Elks club.

Still more praise will be heaped on the team Wednesday night at a banquet at Grace Lutheran church. The state trophies will be presented at that time.

FOREMEN'S CLUB TACKLES ORPHAN CAGERS TONIGHT

Winona I. G. A. Squad Battle Pottery Five In Class B Duel

Battles for championship titles in Salem's two hardwood circuits gets under way at the Memorial building gymnasium tonight.

Two Titles at Stake
Rivals in two championship contests will be the Winona I. G. A. team and the Salem China company, Class B foes, and the two Class A rivals, Mullins Foremen's club and the Sanders' Orphans.

The Pottery triumphed in the second half of the Class B race with Winona winning the first half title. The teams clash at 7:45 with Hugh McPhee of Youngstown as referee.

Mullins and the Orphans are booked to tangle at 8:45 with McPhee also officiating that contest. The Foremen were champions of the second half while the Orphans, coached by John Sanders, were winners of laurels in the opening round.

Play Again Wednesday
A series of hard-fought, thrilling battles are anticipated with the result of each contest uncertain. Second games will be played Wednesday night while third contests necessary will be the attraction Thursday night.

The series gives Salem fans an almost-complete week of basketball. The second annual boys' tournament, in which teams from Ohio, Pennsylvania and West Virginia are expected to compete, will be held on Friday and Saturday.

MUSSOLINI PLAN TO INCLUDE U. S.

New Peace Project Outlined by Premier; Names 4 Powers

(By Associated Press)
ROME, March 20.—The Mussolini peace plan will not be limited to Great Britain, France, Germany and Italy, but will embrace the whole continent and even the United States to a certain extent. Premier Ramsay MacDonald said in an interview today.

The British statesman made the statement before leaving for Paris, to urge Premier Edouard Daladier of France to approve the project. He bid farewell to Signor Mussolini and French Ambassador De Jouvenel, Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, remains in Rome for further sightseeing.

Details Withheld
Mr. MacDonald refused to divulge any details but said "our whole idea is to open up the possibility of complete agreement, not between two, three, four, five or six powers, but all nations concerned."

An official Italian announcement yesterday said "collaboration of the four powers" was proposed in Premier Benito Mussolini's plan but no details were made public.

"We are not proceeding with an idea of two or three agreeing and imposing this agreement on others," Mr. MacDonald said.

Asked regarding the part of the United States, he replied: "We are not overlooking the United States by any means. We need her, too. The American government will be kept fully informed concerning the negotiations."

Situation Dangerous
He repeated a statement made Saturday that the situation in Europe is dangerous but added that "along with the dangers there also exist great opportunities to do something effective to remove them."

Mr. MacDonald called the working out of the Mussolini plan "an evolutionary process," he said, "it would be presented to each nation in accordance with that nation's particular conditions."

Mr. MacDonald exclaimed against excessive nationalism.

"We have got to save Europe and the world and have got to fit our nationalistic ideas into the whole scheme of which we are a part. We all recognize the tremendous urgency of getting a better attitude in the international situation," he added.

He declared repeated summaries of the Mussolini plan dispatched abroad were "sheer imagination."

FRANCE WORRYING
BRITAIN ANGRY
PEACE IS SHAKY

—By Arthur Brisbane—
(Copyright, 1933 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

FRANCE, worrying about the situation in Germany and the hostility of the real Munich, races, as extra compensation, a serious adverse trade balance amounting to more than 2,000,000,000 francs for the first two months of this year, with imports increasing.

That sort of trade must eventually mean loss in gold reserves.

FRANCE knows what it is to suffer deep repudiation on a big scale. For years patriotic Frenchmen and women invested their savings in Russian bonds. Russia was the friend and ally of France. Friendship must be appreciated. The friendly impulse has cost the French people in hard cash more than $6,000,000,000, due to soviet repudiation of czarist obligations. This amounts to more than half the $10,000,000,000 that the United States will probably lose in Europe.

BRITAIN grows daily more angry and anxious in connection with the imprisonment of four Englishmen, accused of sabotage in Moscow. The charge is that they sought to ruin the soviet's $100,000,000 investment in the Dneprostroy dam, completed last May.

The firm employing the imprisoned Englishmen was making a gigantic turbo-generator at the dam, and the blades of the turbines, made of the hardest steel, are found badly corroded. Russia says the Englishmen poured sand or acid into them.

THE BRITISH ambassador is not allowed to see the prisoners, and their friends fear they may be compelled by third-degree brutality to confess guilt which is not real.

British correspondents in Russia doubt that Stalin would permit an error so serious and brutal.

Europe's peace hopes are not improved by that complication.

ABRAM FITKIN, successful business man and philanthropist, just dead, reminds you that this is the country of opportunity. Fitkin started as a preacher, decided that others could do that work better than he, went into business, starting in earnest in 1912. Eighteen years later he had made $250,000.

Such great fortunes may be won, but probably are not. What- ever you make you leave behind. The average white man wants unnecessary millions as a reward for hard work. The average savage in Africa wants many unnecessary fat wives as a reward for fighting lions. It is wise to give each savage the reward that he demands, and thus secure for the community the best work that is in him.

THE HARVARD Teachers' association says examinations for admission to colleges and school examinations generally, are based on a false system.

Dean Holmes usefully picked one foolish educational bubble denying that "all study trains minds."

At least half the study in preparatory schools, high schools and colleges stupefies minds of boys and girls.

A FATHER asks some learned pedagogues: "Why do you waste a boy's few years of study and good memory on things that will be of no use to 999 out of 1,000—Greek, Latin, mathematics?" He is told: "Any kind of studious concentration trains the mind."

That reply might be made by a Mohammedan pedagogue, compelling boys to waste brains and memory learning the Koran by heart.

Waste in education is as stupid as other waste. When he is 10 years out of college, the average boy knows his ABC's, the multiplication table and not much else, except vaguely.

Our whole educational system is only one short step ahead of the Mohammedan teacher sitting on his platform with a long bamboo rod in his hand to hit the head of any boy reciting incorrectly.

Now that Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain has obtained the collaboration of Premier Mussolini of Italy in efforts to gain a reconciliation of the French and German viewpoints, interest centered around the part that Germany's fiery Nazi chancellor, Adolf Hitler, is to play.

Should he follow the outspoken denunciation of the Versailles treaty and its stern limitation upon German military power, which he uttered before he became chancellor, the prospects of any concession on the part of France in the way of agreeing to reduction of its own army would be diminished.

On the other hand observers here held, should Hitler show a conciliatory attitude, France might be reassured and consent to something approximating the MacDonald plan for disarmament advanced last week at Geneva.

American officials, while not commenting for publication, were frankly pleased at the collaboration of Mussolini and MacDonald and felt that if efforts are successful in bringing the heads of the French, German, British and Italian governments together an accord might be reached which would permit the Geneva disarmament conference to be brought to a successful conclusion.

U. S. WATCHES ARMS PARLEY

American Government In Close Touch With Foreign Conference

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The American government today kept in close touch with developments in Europe as the chiefs of the British and Italian governments sought to bring France and Germany into line on a definite program of peace through disarmament.

The United States, while regarding this as a purely European matter, which those nations should work out among themselves, prepared to send abroad on Wednesday this country's special ambassador on disarmament and other world problems—Norman H. Davis of Tennessee.

The big question mark in the European equation, as viewed here, centers over France and Germany. Those nations arrayed against each other in combat only a few years ago, represent the opposing alignments of European states, one determined to enforce the status quo established by the peace treaties at the end of the war, the other striving for a revision of those agreements.

Now that Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain has obtained the collaboration of Premier Mussolini of Italy in efforts to gain a reconciliation of the French and German viewpoints, interest centered around the part that Germany's fiery Nazi chancellor, Adolf Hitler, is to play.

Should he follow the outspoken denunciation of the Versailles treaty and its stern limitation upon German military power, which he uttered before he became chancellor, the prospects of any concession on the part of France in the way of agreeing to reduction of its own army would be diminished.

Thrilling Story of Backstage Life Told in "42nd Street"

WHEN you see "42nd Street," you will witness a backstage drama that's authentic. You will follow the destiny of a musical show from the day of casting to the night of the grand and in the course of the development of the numerous stories of its people, there will be revealed to you many incidents that have parallels in the real-life annals of showmen.

It was directed, written and played by people who know their Broadway and Forty-Second street.

Selection of Girls

Busby Berkeley, who has staged the dances not only for "42nd Street" but for all of Eddie Cantor's films as well as some 20 odd Broadway musicals, has estimated that he interviewed more than 5,000 girls before making final choices for the chorus.

The thousands were reduced to 500, from these Berkeley concentrated upon pretty ankles and selected 300. This group he arranged according to height and picked 100 of those with the prettiest sets of knees.

You will see an identical procedure on a smaller scale in the picture with Warner Baxter enacting the part that Berkeley actually played.

Baxter Is Great

Speaking of Baxter—he is magnificent in this role of Julian Marsh the "slave director." He actually lives the part of this man, who, told by his doctor if he puts on this show it might prove fatal, goes ahead to produce "the best show Marsh ever directed."

Those scenes of the chorus rehearsals he is directing are replete with the agonies the dancing boys and girls must feel when such a master is driving them on and on for days such as this one Baxter portrays—he has never been better.

Then there is Ruby Keeler who is Mrs. Al Jolson in real life but who in "real life" is one fine little actress. In the words of Al himself:

"You ain't seen nothin' yet" until you have seen Ruby with her big eyes and dancing feet.

Bebe Daniels is her usual charming self as the star of the production, who on the eve of its opening in Philadelphia, sprains her ankle in a jealous rage when she thinks Ruby is attempting to steal the affections of George Brent whom she loves dearly. She sings several songs and proves she can also dance.

Whole Cast Fine

Guy Kibbee, the "angel" of the show, Dick Powell, the lad with the fine voice who comes from Pittsburgh, Ginger Rogers, Una Merkel, Ned Sparks, and George E. Stone are others who lend to the greatness of the cast and it is great.

There are songs which include "42nd Street," "I'm Young and Healthy," "Shuffle Off To Broadway," "You're Getting To Be a Habit To Me" and dances that are quite the most spectacular and cleverest that the screen has yet produced.

Sidelights on Ohio Floods

The flood came almost on the anniversary of a 1913 water disaster in southwestern Ohio in which more than 240 lives were lost. The 1913 began the latter part of March and the crest of the Ohio river was reached at 69 feet on April 1. Flood stage here is 52 feet.

Dayton, Middletown and Hamilton, the cities which suffered most in 1913, sat back secure today, however, protected by a flood control system inspired by the disaster. The Miami valley conservancy project, as it is called, has been declared by President Roosevelt to be "ideal" for other watersheds of the country.

The project is composed of four large dams on the Miami river and tributaries and acres of surrounding lowlands into which the flood waters are backed and held.

Chief Edward Miles of the Newport, Ky., fire department was ready for efficient duty, despite the flood waters which covered 35 city blocks. He informed the populace he had a boat equipped with apparatus which can be towed to any house in the flooded region.

The Cincinnati fire department went out in rowboats to fight flames which almost destroyed two traction cars. They resorted to the boats when the waters swept upon their engine.

Governor George White of Ohio, through Adj. Gen. Frank Henderson, offered Cincinnati the aid of troops, but city officials replied with thanks that there was no lawlessness to require such.

In rescuing marooned campers at Miami Grove, near Cincinnati, boatmen had to exercise caution to avoid running "aground" on automobiles completely under water. Fifty persons sat atop their cabins for more than six hours before being taken off.

A Cincinnati warehouse advertised that if water blocked its loading platforms, "dependable boat service" would be made available.

Cincinnati's new $41,000,000 union terminal was opened ahead of time as the waters of the Ohio river poured into the waiting room of the

TWO PERISH IN OHIO TRAGEDY

Wife Is Slain by Crazy Husband Who Later Kills Himself

(By Associated Press)
CINCINNATI, March 20.—Two persons were dead today in the gruesome climax of a domestic quarrel.

After killing his wife and dismembering the body, Charles D. Evans, 50, Indianapolis contractor and carpenter, committed suicide when police here stumbled upon his crime.

Body Found in Pans
While three officers battled him before a large crowd, Evans slashed his wrists and throat with a safety razor blade. The woman's dismembered body was discovered in the rear of his automobile when police stopped him yesterday for a traffic law violation. Portions of the body were hidden in a wash boiler and cooking utensils.

The couple had been estranged and Evans had been ordered by a court to pay his wife, Ella, $2,500 monthly.

Evans became highly nervous when a traffic officer stopped his car. Thinking the Indian might be a liquor runner, the officer lifted a tarpaulin covering the back seat of the car. Spying the utensils, he put his hand in one.

"What's this?" the officer inquired.

"Hans," replied Evans, "I killed a hog."

Draws Razor Blade
Then he drew the razor blade from his pocket and began cutting himself. After shooting at his arm to stop him, the officers tried to add, but to no avail. Before the final slash at his throat, the crazed man drew $152 from his pocket and shouted, "Give this to my mother."

At the Evans home in Indianapolis authorities found what apparently were bloodstains on the walls of the bathroom and rugs and stained clothing in the furnace.

A maid said the Evans had a violent argument Thursday night, and that Mrs. Evans was not there when she reported for work Friday. Evans told her, she said, that his wife had left at 2 a. m. and not returned.
